About the CIMI® Program

Beyond Infant Massage, with knowledge comes the responsibility to raise the bar. Our CEO, Andrea Kelly, developed the TRIAD Model® based on the careful study of Lipton's groundbreaking research, the new science of epigenetics. "Epigenetics is the science of how environmental signals select, modify, and regulate gene activity. This awareness reveals how genes are constantly being remodeled in response to life experiences which again emphasizes that our perceptions of life shape our biology."

Lipton, page 24, Biology of Belief

The TRIAD Model™ teaches that epigenetics is the continuum of DNA development after birth based on the influence of environment, touch, and communication. The TRIAD Model teaches parents to provide a positive and safe environment coupled with nurturing touch and compassionate communication so their children may thrive and not just survive.

Our class is geared to teach professionals that work with parents and their babies. The CIMI teach classes in a series of sessions. Classes usually meet weekly for five to six weeks or the CIMI may schedule private instruction.

Our hands-on method insures that the parents will learn the art of interactive massage to suit your baby's individual schedule, needs and developmental level.

This class will empower parents to feel confident that they will assist in the process to maximize their baby's potential.
